

John D. ("Jack") Twiggs

Jack is an internationally certified forensics photographer which developed early in and as a part of his law enforcement career as a U.S. Federal Special Agent. His forensics photographic evidence has been accredited at U.S. state and federal courts, the federal courts of twenty-two other countries and at the World Court of Justice.

In past years he performed sports photography at the collegiate and semiprofessional sports levels for seven years as a sideline activity, has been an active nature and macro photographer for many years, and has taught a variety of photography classes both in the United States and abroad.

He has successfully competed in local, national and international competitions since 1990 and began judging local club competitions in 2006. In addition to taking workshops from the Professional Photographers of America and others to enhance his judging abilities, he has taken all judging related courses from the Photographic Society of America (PSA) and has been judging for the PSA since 2015. He has judged photography competitions singly and as part of multi-judge panels well over one hundred times at the local club level, the regional and national levels and at the international level. He is currently working towards his PSA Masters (MPSA) distinction.

Jack and his wife Sheri, who is also a photographer, are retired and are concentrating much of their time on photographing some of the natural beauty and wildlife of the United States and other countries. They currently live in Beverly Hills, Florida.
